RENEWED ILLIBERALITY.

We have received from Rev. Mr. Pesenthal and Simon Wolf, Esq., respectively, the Chicago Republican and the New York Evening Post, in which appeared an article from each, touching illiberal attacks on the character of the Jews in general. We have not the space at our command to reproduce both the articles, and we can merely thank the writers, as a party interested, for their alacrity in shielding the reputation of Israelites against the wanton assaults, now so often made in utter ignorance of what we actually are. We must at the same time, express our gratification, that it is not so much at present the duty of the Jewish press to come always to the rescue, while there are valiant men and true, outside of its circle, who have the ability and the heart to defend themselves and their brothers against the malignity which has not been assuaged materially through the lapse of centuries. But we must remind the gentlemen, who have lately assumed the defensive armor, that they cannot be surprised at the turn things are taking. The war, which has steeped the hand in blood, and desolated the most productive portion of the continent, while the destroyers thought themselves engaged in a pious war, took, from its very commencement, a religious tinge, though it by no means favored religious development. On both sides, the contestants proclaimed fasts and days of humiliation, to invoke the aid of Heaven on their party, that they might become the slayers, the others the victims; that they might become the conquerors, the others the conquered; that they might carry ruin and mourning over all the opposite section, while they should revel in security. It was all the time said they were waging war as a Christian people, carrying out the principles of the Christian gospels, and they trusted that the result would confirm Christianity. It seemed never to have entered the imagination of the wranglers, that this very contest was a protest against the spirit of love which ought to rule in a republic even more than in a monarchy; and that the gospels had proved themselves an utter failure as a message of peace, in not being able to restrain the uplifted arm of violence, when a conciliatory policy might, perchance, have averted the blow. We do not speak as a partisan, but simply as we would do, were we to write a history. The passions on both sides were appealed to; each one was afraid to yield a little, out of fear to display too much the spirit of conciliation, and the result is before us, without its being in the power of the most sagacious to predict how the disjointed elements of the commonwealth will rearrange themselves, and whether civil and religious liberty have not received, during the fierceness of the contest, a staggering blow, from which they may perhaps never fully recover. The very freeing of the slaves, over which so much joy is expressed, without saying a word in favor of human bondage, was either a premeditated trick before the war was commenced, and thus a fraud on the compact which united the States, or, at best, the result of religious pressure brought to bear on the Executive of the Union, as the clergy notoriously urged the removal of slavery as a disgrace to civilization. They were, perhaps, the instruments of politicians, who, both they and their tools, in most instances, were the advocates of bondage not many years, nay, not many months before the war, and whose conscience was, perchance, awakened by the idea of inflicting on their enemies the utmost possible injury, without incurring thereby any pecuniary loss or personal risk. On the other side, fierce Scriptural arguments were adduced, to prove that slavery was the perfection of society: that the greatest amount of happiness could be procured for the whole population of a State, by making capital out of the labor. The gospels were again appealed to; and thus arose one of the most destructive struggles the earth ever witnessed, which caused more slaughter, the numbers of inhabitants in the respective sections considered, and accumulated more debt and taxation; in a given time, than history has ever before recorded, while religious arguments served as fuel, and fanatical zeal fanned the flame.

It matters not what our views on the subject are; since, if they be ever so good, they could be of no effect in turning the scale of public opinion; we merely state simply what every calm observer knows full well, and cannot dispute. We want, however, merely to account for the spirit of hostility towards the Jews, now so rife in the country; and having pointed out the cause, leave it to intelligent minds to apply the remedy whenever needed. In the South, we were accused of not being hearty in the contest, and Jews and disaffected became convertible terms, notwithstanding that hundreds of natives and immigrants, served in the armies of the Confederates; and many breathed forth their spirit on the field of slaughter, or were maimed for life by ghastly and terrible wounds, while all shared the hardships and fatigues of the campaign, and few that we ever heard of betrayed a trust reposed in them. Others in civil life, too, took their stand with their fellow-citizens, and even the smuggling trade, so universally denounced, with a great deal of justice, became a source of much aid in furnishing articles not otherwise accessible. All this may be considered a crime in them, by persons living in this section, but a candid mind will say that the Hebrew portion could not separate itself from the others, without committing a suicidal act. Still, if one may judge from Southern papers, the phials of hatred were poured out over everything Jewish, although the best head probably of the whole did derive his origin from Hebrew parents. But his persistence in always speaking of the universal God, whom Israel adores, and referring to Him alone, in all the proclamations of thanksgiving or fast days which emanated from his pen, caused many to urge his removal from a post which, though perhaps honorable as far as it went, was still one of danger, and of this the sagacious occupant was fully aware months before the collapse of the structure which he had aided to rear. Our readers will see, that trinitarian prejudice had much to do with the odium to which Mr. Benjamin was subjected; and had the South succeeded he would not have been able to maintain himself; and, so far as the evil disposed could have done it, they would have rendered the Israelites exceedingly uncomfortable, though, perhaps, on the other hand, the general liberality of feeling of Southerners might have been strong enough to render this foolish prejudice harmless in its effects.

Now, let us turn to the North. It has been the fashion to call all those who were engaged in smuggling or blockade running, as it was termed, Jews, though we are convinced, and so are those who make the charge, that the Gentiles did not fail to do their share in evading the commercial restrictions whenever opportunity offered. We never could justify any one's violating the law, and felt no sympathy for those who, when caught, had to pay heavy fines and suffer imprisonment; for they knew the risk they were running, and had no right to escape the consequences when detected. But even admitting that all the captured had been Jews, it would simply amount to this, that many adventurers, having come hither to better their condition, with at more regard for liberty than any other abstraction which leads not to wealth, they were stimulated by the scarcity of most commodities in the South, to run the risk which contraband trade involves, in order to take their chance of a great gain. Few residents of long standing, or persons born in the land, we are sure, can be proved to have participated in it; and as many large mercantile firms of Christian sects have been known to have fallen under the suspicion of the government, and as probably there were not ten Jewish ship-owners all over the country, while many vessels, of course the property of Christians, were employed in the business, we should judge that any charge founded on this ground, as a motive for suspicion against us, as a class, is at least exaggerated, and consequently unjust, if for no other reason even. But the greatest sin committed by Israelites, in the estimation of the friends of abolition, was that many favored, as they always have done, the doctrines of the democratic party, with which the freeing of all slaves was not a fundamental principle. Hence, the violent and virulent denunciation so often indulged in by extreme men in the Northern section, while a reason of the opposite kind in the South, that the Jews were not strong enough on the pro-slavery side, caused them to be suspected there too. Both parties seem to have forgotten that we, as a religious body, have no creed on the subject of slavery; that the Synagogue has no right to interfere in politics; that, so far as our religion is concerned, a person may be a democrat, royalist, pro or anti-slavery, or for any form or sort of government, without forfeiting his rights as a Hebrew. We have not been rarely asked what doctrines our church had as regards slavery; and the questioners were rather surprised that there was none, so far as we understood the law, while the good souls forgot to remember that it was but lately that nearly all Christendom was not alone engaged in slave-holding, but in slave-hunting on the coasts of Africa, or among Indian tribes in America, and carrying them to where their forced labor could be made productive. Slavery existed here by the assent at least of the Constitution, and, as such, was accepted by most thinking Israelites, as a part of the polity of the land, with which they had no right to meddle. No one could prevent them to join an anti-slavery society, and use their influence to induce others to do likewise; but surely there was no compulsion, either moral or equitable, to give their adhesion to the modern crusade which, though perchance conferring benefits on millions, deprived millions of others of their vested rights, in taking from them property which was forced on them by the former government of America, when it was seated in Great Britain, and by the ancestors of the men probably who now, in the change and progressions of seasons, have learned to call slavery "the sum-total of human wickedness." Many Israelites did think human bondage a moral wrong, and few of them even were extensive slave-holders, and fewer yet engaged in planting business, the chief nursery of the system of owned labor; wherefore, taking it all in all, it is a monstrous absurdity to fasten on Jews any part of the odium which the holding of property in man now confers on its advocates.

But, unless we err, this notion, that most of us are not strong enough in the doctrine of modern freedom, has done its share towards inducing the prejudice now complained of, especially since, as stated, the church assemblies have lately made hostility to bondage a portion of their professions, and have deserted as their enemies those who do not fully coincide with them. The modern Religion, for the last four years, required a noisy demonstration of adhesion; and hence odium can easily be roused against the quiet portion of the community who, whether Jews or not, simply acquiesce in results without rejoicing loudly over the events. But the process of the anti-slavery movement, though it did not originate with the clergy, and perhaps sprung from minds who had no greater affection for religion of any kind, is now looked upon as a triumph of Christian loving kindness; and those freed by it have become objects of care and solicitude; and thus missionary enterprises have received a new impulse, and a renewed effort to propagate the gospels has been made, under the conviction that it is a duty which professors of Christianity owe to the whole world, and particularly those living within the limits of countries where the majority allege to believe in it, and are, therefore, called Christian lands, to propagate these doctrines at all hazards.

And as the church has secured in this manner, not alone the liberation of the slaves, but given its followers also the task of civilizing and Christianizing them, it is natural that those who do not believe in Christianity become at once objects of dislike, if they have not been so before already. The war, though necessary to eradicate bondage; and therefore, in the eyes of the one idea abolitionists, a blessing, has nevertheless proved itself the source of so much mischief in every sense of the word, that the result, so much coveted, has not compensated the labor at large for the cost in life, limbs, treasure, and general liberty. It is, therefore, also regarded as a curse, and ascribed to the wrath of God, for His not having been acknowledged in the Constitution; and as sectarians know nothing of a sole God, they include an associate or a son, whose government must be recognized before Heaven can be appeased. The efforts accordingly made last year, and which will no doubt be resumed, sooner or later, to amend, or rather disfigure the Constitution of the United States, are legitimate descendants of the new order of things, and will sooner or later increase in intensity than otherwise. What can this produce, but prejudice against the Jews, who are the chief parties interested in opposing the amendment? It is true, that all liberal men will undoubtedly join in this opposition; but they would not be disfranchised by any amendment, for their conscience would not revolt at taking any test oath, which must act as a bar to Israelites.

Again with the great increase of Hebrew residents in America, their general prosperity has also augmented in the same ratio, and in most large cities Jewish people occupy some of the finest residences. Now, if nothing else would cause prejudice, this circumstance will do so to a certainty; and we see no means to avert it, except that we pursue the course adopted in the East, where the squalid and dilapidated outside of the houses is said to conceal the elegance and wealth within. While we are poor and unsightly, we may be tolerated; but let us only look up, and become the social equals of our neighbors, and then ire will be at once roused, that we should dare to enjoy the blessings of the earth, which are justly due solely to the members of the only saving church. Neither patriotic devotion to the country, as so many Jewish soldiers in the Northern armies have shown; no sacrifice of means for sustaining the government, as many have displayed; no honesty in dealing with the people, and no faithful fulfillment of contracts awarded to the lowest bidder, in short, can atone for the fact that we have progressed with the divine blessing, spite of adverse circumstances; for it is the unbelieving Jews, who have at last no claim to a true bigot's sympathy, who have succeeded; and if the laws do not permit their oppression, at least they can be made odious, by constantly denouncing them for faults they have not, and magnifying those they have, while it is perfectly legitimate, in the inquisitorial system of jurisprudence, to impute to all the wrong by a few, though they have been denounced and disapproved by the honorable and virtuous of their fellow-Israelites.—Occident, Philadelphia.

NEW METHOD OF MAKING BREAD.—Good bread is a good thing, and one not so easily obtained. A correspondent of the American Agriculturist says she can make good bread and she tells others how to do it. She says: "Instead of protracted agony of twelve or eighteen hours, it will only be a pleasant exercise of a few minutes in making it—just two hours for raising—and baked in fifty minutes, and then out come the loaves, so round and light so tender and sweet, the whole household will be delighted. The first thing, and last in fact, is a proper temperature, both while making it and in process of raising. Without heat, internal as well as external, fermentation cannot be rapid enough. Then heat two bricks to 100 deg. or more, and place the pan you make the bread in upon them, and so knead and work in the heat with the material. And now, though the great army of bread bakers stand up in floury array against me, and even shake their doughy fingers at me, I shall not wince or abate one jot. Success is the test of merit, as the world goes, and the past delusive notion that, after bread is light once, it must forsooth be moulded over into loaves, and set to work again, is all nonsense. It often induces to sourness, certainly multiplies labor, and takes time. Well, then, have two tins well greased, and divide the dough equally. (I use two quart tins, which, of course, requires two quarts of flour and over for a loaf), and set them to rise by the stove on the hot bricks, with a piece of carpet over the bricks, to moderate the heat, and then well cover with warm woollen. In two hours it will be rising like Aladdin's palace, and when fairly brimming full place it in your oven, and you will soon have as delicious bread to eat as one ought to expect out of Paradise. I claim this as original, and only ask you to follow these directions, and give us the result. This bread-making ceases to be the tax on time and patience it usually is, and the harassing doubts and fears one usually goes through with while following the old method, are quite done away with. I could say much on the philosophy of baking bread, in adjusting the "golden mean," which after all is half a peep into some of the closed ovens would, I fear, call out the exclamation of the dogs in Landseer's picture of "Too hot, too hot." These instructions are so plain, and the results promised so great, that they are worth trying."

THE JEWISH ACADEMY.—As we announced in our June number, the project of the creation of a Jewish Academy, proposed by Mr. Albert Cohn to the Universal Israelitish Alliance, has just made the first start. The first scholar entitled by his literary and moral merit to have a seat among the representatives of Jewish science, is M. Beer Goldberg, a learned Hebrew, who as yet has acquired as little glory as fortune by his devotion to rabbinical studies and his diverse publications connected with Hebrew philology and Jewish history. The title of academician conferred on him, with the privileges attached thereto, does honor not only to him that bears it, but also to those who conferred it.—A. I.

REV. WARD BEECHER PREACHINGS ON HELL—THE UNIVERSALISTS CLAIM HIM.

Ward Beecher's late sermon on hell, has not only been criticised but has become an event in the pulpits of the country, and some of the Universalists are claiming that as he does not believe in a hell, he is one of them. On the 8th of October, the pastor in the Universalist church in Hartford, addressed a large congregation on this interesting question.

He used for his text Romans 13:13: "The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the garments of light;" and also Romans 13:19: "Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace, and the things wherewith we may edify another."

That Mr. Beecher both was and was not a Universalist, and was standing in a very peculiar position, ecclesiastically connected with the Congregationalist Church, standing in the front rank of that denomination and leading them on, they not knowing where, and perchance he not knowing whither he might go, God knowing what He was doing with him, and for what He was using him as an instrument; that theologically and sympathetically, Mr. Beecher was a Universalist.

Mr. Peters then quoted from the New York Evangelist of 1852, which says:

"Beecher's words are like millions of drops of rain falling upon the mountain side and loosening the soil, the result of which by and by will be a tremendous slide over into Universalism or Unitarianism."

Showing that Mr. Beecher's determined and persistent course for several years was not accidental, or pursued by him in ignorance of its inevitable influence upon the thousands of his hearers.

Mr. Beecher denies—and with such decided emphasis that none can misunderstand him—the doctrine of a material hell! just what the Universalist ministers have been preaching against for sixty or seventy years.

Mr. Beecher confessed that the doctrine of future punishment was wholly unknown to the Old Testament writers, and that nowhere in the Old Testament is there any reference to such a doctrine as endless or future punishment. Mr. Beecher in speaking of this doctrine of future punishment says that a very remarkable feature is, that this doctrine does not appear in the Old Testament at all, and in the New Testament, we might almost say, but just alluded to anywhere except in the teaching of the Savior.

Mr. Beecher said in 1857: "The great lever by which to raise and save the world is to preach the unbounded love and mercy of God."

Mr. Beecher shrinks from conversing on the doctrine of endless punishment; very seldom refers to it, and does not wish to affirm it, as the article clearly shows.

That it was a popular error to believe that the majority of the Universalists believe that death is going to save us, and that when we die we go from this world into a land of eternal glory and everlasting peace and happiness; while the truth is, on the testimony, that they believe in future discipline, and so imply future punishment; but that when the object of punishment is accomplished, the punishment will cease; and that the salvation of men is not limited to this world.

Mr. Peters then referred to conversations he had had with members of Mr. Beecher's church, showing the comparative indifference with which he regarded that portion of their creed which refers to endless punishment; and alluded to a lecture delivered a few months ago by Mr. Beecher in Dr. Chapin's Church in New York, the proceeds of which were to assist in the establishment of a Universalist college, the "Clinton Liberal Institute," and to remarks made by him that "when men were almost animals, when they were pressed down to the earth in ignorance and selfishness, and covered all over with the darkness of superstition, then fire, and hell, and awful fears of damnation were appropriate for them; but when they were stirred up and driven toward the right, then God sent higher influences to act upon them. He gave his son for their good, and that they might be drawn by love from the darkness of sin," clearly stating that as long as man was in the low valley of sensualism, covered over by superstition, ignorance and sin, these awful pictures of everlasting fire and of hell, may prevail to drive them from their wickedness; but when men come up to a certain state of cultivation, and take in the light of knowledge, then the time has come when you may preach Universalism.

He said that Mr. Beecher was a religious Columbus, who now and then goes out on a great voyage of discovery, goes out of the old into the new world of religious thought. Like Columbus he likes exceedingly to sail over the forbidden sea of investigation, to touch the shores of the new world of religious promise; look over the fair landscape, and beautiful prospect that lies before him, and then return to his brethren and people, and to tell them all about what he has found there in that better land, and he tells them, and applaud his originality.

He then remarked that there was a sense in which it might be said that Dr. Tyng of the New York Episcopal Church, Hatfield and Stokton of the Methodist Church, Magoon of the Baptist, Dr. Bellows of the Unitarian, Doctor Chapin of the Universalist, and Beecher of the Congregationalist, are linked together in the noble work of breaking up the old sectarian hates in this country, the great prejudices which are emblematic of this country; are working to demolish the middle wall or partition erected in the curious old times between the churches; and thus they are liberalizing the country; thus bringing the people of the different churches into closer sympathy on all the great main questions of religion whatever opinions may prevail upon minor questions.

SERVED RIGHT.—The Moniteur of Sept. 27th has the following announcement at the head of its summary news: "M. Billon, Commissary of Police at Marseilles, having abandoned his post to avoid the cholera epidemic, an Imperial decree of 26th September has dismissed him from his office."

THE ISRAELITES OF FRANCE.

It is more than probable that already in the time of Julius Caesar there were Israelites in France. No doubt they at that time were not numerous; but in course of time they increased to such a degree that already in the eleventh century their number exceeded a million. In 1293, we are assured, there were in the French army more than 30,000 Jewish soldiers, among whom a considerable number distinguished themselves by their courage and bravery—(see Theod. de Jure and Saint Jud., p. 26). In the most remote times already they possessed at Marseilles two magnificent synagogues—(see Misc. antiq. Sacl., p. 371.)—which a rich and old Roman lady, having embraced Judaism at the age of 60, despite the objections of the Jews, and bearing the name of Sarah, had caused to be built, or at least richly adorned, as is clear from the following Latin inscription found there: "Beturia Pallia, F. domi haterne quas tiluta que bi hit, an LXXXVI, menses VI, nomine Sara, mater synagogarum in Campi et bolumany. Behirena ayequeia ayitis."

This phrase is probably corrupted by the barbarisms which are found rather frequently in ancient Latin inscriptions. Its meaning, no doubt, is: "Beturia, daughter of Paul, deposited in the eternal house, lived 86 years and 9 months; as proselyte, under the name of Sara, 16 years. Mother of the Synagogue of the Campus and Bolumany. Peace be on her place of rest."

The designation of "mater synagogarum," as justly remarked by Dr. Levy, of Breslau, in the second volume of the annual of the History of the Jews, 1861, can only be taken in the sense that she caused the synagogue to be built, analogous to the term "mater castrorum." This inscription offers a particular interest to whoever investigates the sources of Israelitish history. An attempt was made to identify the proselyte Beturia named here with that mentioned in the Talmud, who passed over to Judaism with her slaves, who was well versed in Holy Writ, and converted on it with Rabbi Gamliel, which is not improbable.

The Israelites of France, by the complete liberty which they enjoyed, excelled all Israelites of other countries in the arts and sciences. Especially the most illustrious Talmudists were to be found in France; among others the celebrated commentator called Yarchi or Rashi.

According to the report of Rabbi Solomon Tsheseth (p. 41), the largest portion of the tribe of Benjamin and the priests, as well as also some of the tribe of Judah, repaired to France. As the Jews of France for some time were in possession of the greatest liberty and privileges, as they were a long time treated in France with humanity and gentleness, as in most ancient times there were accorded to them the same protection and the same rights as to other inhabitants, and were also raised to high public functions, they felt the more deeply and painfully the storms and persecutions which overtook them later. The first tempest which burst forth against them took place in 1181, under Philippe Auguste II. Scarcely had they recovered a little when they were suddenly disturbed in their repose and exiled from France, in virtue of an order sent from Palestine, by Louis IX, called the Saint. This banishment took place about the year 1253.

The following, according to Rabbi Solomon (p. 142), was the cause of the first expulsion of the Israelites under Philippe Auguste. A Dominican monk, a confessor of the Queen, was on an intimate footing with a very beautiful Jewess; but as she would not marry him, he being uncircumcised, he, in the presence of several respectable Israelites, caused himself secretly to be circumcised, embraced the Jewish religion, and married his beloved. When the chiefs of the order heard this they lodged a complaint with the king, and obtained the sentence that all Jews who had attended the circumcision should be burnt alive, and the others driven from the country. Such was the fate of Israel in those dark times; all Israel was made responsible for individual wrongs. Simultaneously with this sad persecution of the Jews in France, a lighted torch, says Rabbi Solomon (Shebeth Yehudah, 415), was put in the market place of Bodon, and heralds called out in the streets that such Jews as wished to escape this persecution and pass over to Christianity, should do so while this torch was burning, but when extinguished it would be too late, and they would all be burnt alive. There was at Bodon an Israelite who enjoyed the particular favor of the governor. To him the governor made great and brilliant promises in the event of his abjuring Judaism, and becoming a Christian. But when the Jew, despite all these offers, unshakably persevered in the inherited faith, the governor likewise threatened him with the horrible death on the pile. The Israelite replied, "It is possible that approaching the terrible fire and seeing the flames, I may change my mind for fear." Upon this the governor ordered a large fire to be kindled in the market place, and when he, together with the Jew, drew nigh to it, the latter seized him and cast him into the flames, and then threw himself into it, and thus both perished.

Despite this expulsion of the Jews from France, there were many in the country who in appearance were Christians—Aquins, and most of whom, in order to be quite safe, entered ecclesiastical orders. Thus, among others, the celebrated Jewish physician Orobias, who came from Spain to Toulouse, and who, in consideration of his vast knowledge, officiated there for some years as professor, and afterwards became physician to the King, having successfully engaged in medical studies, (see Basnage, c. 32, p. 2112). That the very celebrated scholar, John Bodinus, was likewise a secret Jew, is clear from his writings, notably from his Repsapienties, where he ardently supports the proofs produced by the Jews.

In May, 1615, Louis XIII. ordered that all Jews sojourning in the country under the mask of Christianity, should quit his dominions within one month, and this despite the earnest interposition in their behalf by his much esteemed physician, the Portuguese Israelite, Philoacus Acliamas de Montalvo.

CONSOLATION FOR THE CONDEMNED.

"Yea, though I walk in the valley of the shadow of death, I'll fear no evil; for Thou art with me."
—PSALM 23, v. 4.

That man is a responsible creature, we know from the promptings of reason and conscience; both conforming with Holy Writ. We are also aware that by pursuing a certain course, he secures that share of happiness, or conscientious repose, commensurate with virtuous conduct. Alive to this immutable and constantly present fact, the evil tendencies of man's nature subject him to a constant warfare, in which he often loses the hope of gaining that end which his better nature sought. Awakened by the warnings of conscience, he is constantly urged to the pursuits qualified to improve his erring disposition; at times, affording relief from the surges of an iniquitous torrent, while anon he is covered and quite overcome by the overwhelming waves of sin. Lamentable is the reflection, when beholding the fruitless efforts of beings aware of the multitudinous beatitudes of virtue, yet involuntarily despising its divine fruits, turning aside from that mysterious electric property of the soul, "conscience," and sinking to the level of the irrational—devoid of this grand and exclusive communion with Heaven itself.

Oh, that man would take this gentle and Divine monitor as his guide! How happy could he be; how well fulfill the mission imposed by Him who implanted this, his work, as man's great prerogative.

Wishing, striving, yet unable to baffle conflicting passions, how pitiful seems the lot of man in this state. Teachings impossible to be understood by reason, or acquiesced in by faith or piety, are of no avail in this fallen condition. Heaven has not given to man its permission, "that he may revel in iniquity, and forget the requirements of virtue." The promises of eternal bliss or punishment are fruitless save with the ignorant, and with the enlightened tend to deprecate that respect for Divine goodness and justice which is the true and only basis of moral excellence.

In the daily walks of life are met those condemned to an endless fire, (simply on sectarian grounds); while to others, (in this belief, equally discarding the natural workings of eternal justice), it grants a full pardon; at once militating against God and society, while pretending to confine infinite jurisdiction. Judging from finite knowledge, we believe God is all good; to dissent from which is sinful, and this to an untortured understanding is evident. Two of the attributes vouchsafed and made known by God to man, are Goodness and Mercy—both far beyond our limited conception; hence it is clearly impossible for the finite to commit an offense meriting infinite punishment. To assume the contrary, would be both senseless and impious; though sophistry were to labor countless ages to maintain the fallacy. Man being a responsible and free agent, constantly awake to the consequences of iniquity, desirous, yet often driven from the road to virtue, cannot abide by a doctrine consigning some to eternal punishment, and others (of doctrinal purity) to eternal felicity.

God is "All-merciful," and let that mind when "the valley of the shadow of death" seems most to yawn, "fear not;" let it be consoled and "cease to do evil;" for "no man lives that sins not." The savage, no less than the most refined intellect, is continually calling up the most beatific vision consistent with virtuous conduct, but the grosser tendencies drive away these angelic conceptions, and put to flight the heavenly dream. Hence, contrary to the soul's sincerest aspirations, man is forced to forego the realization of this golden vision. Beaten by the winter's hail, struck by the summer's heat, man is comparatively helpless; the one he might avoid, and so the other; but how this mysterious blending of will and action? Body and soul! Mysterious link, the one tempting; the other and nobler, struggling.

There is a secret voice that cries, "this cannot be forever;" as the soul, true to its parent power, must in the end prove the victor; when it shall behold in Divine security the failings which so enthralled its development. When the deluded frame shall be convinced of the folly of its past, scorn the blandishments of sense and the wicked sophistry of the world, on its way to the Supreme Justice.

Think now of that creature, bent with age and iniquity; see him clothed in poverty, scan his woe-worn countenance; ask him, for he alone can answer, if, while thus debased, he sees not (like consumption's victim) both the beauty and horror of existence—combining, as it darkens this scene of misery. Ask him if his soul hangs not to its Father's bosom; and to declare if there lingers not an inexpressible and mysterious joy arising from the conviction, that the time will surely come when he shall be so constituted as to loathe that which now seems impossible to avoid; when the time shall arrive and be realized the words of Him who said: "I will put a new heart within their bodies, that they may know and serve me aright."

MUSICAL KNOWLEDGE.

Few communities of such an early age as San Francisco can boast of so great a number of musicians of note, or so large a number of the rising generation striving to become musicians. Vocal and instrumental music is part and parcel of the educational system of the age. Our children are taught the rudiments of the science with their primers, and all unite in endeavoring to cultivate an art so pleasing and so elevating; yet how many are there who now are students that have genius to grasp at and comprehend the subtleties of the science, to give expression, to execute, to clothe, as it were, with language the sentiments of the composer? How many pupils really comprehend the true meaning of the exercises or compositions they render? But few indeed. The diffusion of musical knowledge requires a vigorous and determined attack on the superficial style of teaching so much in vogue. Robert Goldbeck, in a recent article on this musical error, declares that the present method is "parrot-like," and gives these hints:

"I conceive it to be the duty of every teacher to encourage his or her pupils to take part in such class exercises, fully convinced that the results of these will act favorably upon the pupils' piano or singing lessons. Let us now consider what the general and special results of such fundamental, and I maintain, easily acquired musical knowledge would be: 1. General results—1. The raising of the musical intelligence of the community at large to a degree of elevation which it has never before enjoyed. 2. The calling into life a discriminating sense, distinguishing the good from the bad, the real merit from ignorant and impudent charlatanism. Special results to both pianists and singers—1. An increased facility of reading at sight. 2. A better insight into the general correctness of a musical production, (an indispensable aid, in this age of trash, to the choice of good pieces), and a consequent better appreciation of its beauties. 3. Cultivation of the ear by means of practice of the intervals. This latter point is of especial value to the singer, to whom the knowledge of the intervals would prove a great saving of time; for, what he spent years to learn by an instructive, unconscious and gradual process of study, he might acquire in a few months of intelligent application, thereby quickening and ensuring his steady progress in intonation and reading."

"Were energetic efforts to be made by competent musicians to establish classes for fundamental musical instruction in every part of this country, the general standard of taste and capacity of appreciation would be, in a very few years, so elevated and improved, that it would bear favorable comparison with what might be termed the musical moral of such countries as Germany, England and France."

These remarks are very opportune, as we have in our midst young ladies of tender years who best exemplify the benefits of thorough musical training; a training which, whilst it develops the mechanical powers of the hand in fingering, does not neglect intellectual advancement. Children we may call them, yet possessed of the true fire of genius and the capacity to comprehend the subtleties of composition; to clothe poetry and romance in a radiant garb of sweet concord. All individuals are not born musicians, but much depends on training and education to develop what talent may be latent. We know of many parents who care simply that their children shall obtain sufficient mastery over an instrument to enable them to make themselves agreeable to company, but seem to ignore the fact that there is much more in music than harmonious sounds. To such we would instance the surprising proficiency of two sisters, Miss Emma Laemlein, aged fifteen, and Miss Rebecca Laemlein, aged thirteen, residents of this city, who have created a marked success in private circles in this city, by their really astonishing mastery of the piano-forte, and form striking exemplars to all who may be studying the intricacies of that instrument. We hope that they will be permitted to give the public an opportunity of realizing a rare musical feast, and we feel assured that all who have been privileged to hear them in private will unite with us in inducing their parents to permit them to perform, as we feel assured that their great powers will infuse a spirit of emulation among all students. The Misses Laemlein are co-religionists, their parents and relations are residents of San Francisco, and we feel assured that they will prove themselves great artists.

DEATH OF AN OLD AND PIOUS CO-RELIGIONIST.—The cold hand of Death has taken away from us our old friend, Mr. Raphael Jacobson, who died at his residence on Sunday evening, after a short illness. He immigrated to this country in the year 1852, and immediately engaged in his business as Shoet and Reader, adhering strictly to the old orthodox style. Mr. Jacobson was a member of the First Hebrew Benevolent Society, and Congregation and Society Beth-Israel, the members of which attended his funeral in a body. His remains were interred in the Home of Peace Cemetery, which was done on account of his having expressed that wish before he died. Rev. Dr. Eckman officiated, and delivered a fervent address in German. He was a native of Prussia, 65 years of age, and leaves a wife and a host of friends to mourn his loss. May his soul rest in peace.

MORE JEWISH TALENT.—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jackson, who recently arrived from Australia, are now performing at Maguire's Opera House. Mr. Jackson is an actor of rare comic powers, while Mrs. J. is a tragedienne of more than ordinary abilities. Both have become favorites.

RETURNED.—Among the passengers who arrived on the steamer Constitution, was Mr. M. J. Newmark, who visited New York to organize some mining companies for the Reese River District, Nevada. Mr. N. succeeded in his enterprise, and will leave for that section in a few days as superintendent of the works.

THE STATE SENATORSHIP.

The Union party of this city have nominated our co-religionist, Louis Cohn, Esq., as the candidate for the State Senate to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Mr. Redington. Mr. Cohn was a candidate at the late State election for the Assembly and he secured more votes than his associates, who failed to secure majorities—a flattering compliment, even to the defeated. Mr. Cohn stands deservedly high as a citizen of repute, a young man of talent and probity, one who has been identified for years with our Fire Department, of whose noble charity he is a trustee, with the militia of the State, and with every organization which has charity for its object and the elevation of mankind for its aim. A man of the most elevated yet liberal sentiments, cultivated tastes and fully competent to represent the metropolis of the Pacific in the legislative halls. Familiar with the wants of our citizens, with the commerce of our State, and capable of doing his duty only as an honorable and honest man can. We sincerely trust that the result of the election will be his triumphant return, not alone because we feel assured that his election will confer honor on our State, but that it may go forth as an example of the honorable and liberal feeling of San Francisco, the residents of which measure men for their worth and ignore illiberality which would mark a man for following the honored and revered creed of his fathers. Mr. Cohn, besides being an Israelite, is a southern man, a native of Charleston, South Carolina, and during the whole period of the trying times of the late rebellion, he proved his devotion to the Union by his unqualified sustenance of its integrity—the Union and nothing but the whole Union of States without geographical lines of division. Mr. Cohn is no mere sojourner in our midst. He is a Californian, whose every interest is bound in this State; whose "vine and fig-tree," family and all, are here in our midst. He enjoys the warm friendship of a host of citizens, and if our readers will only go to work properly, do their duties as citizens, we have every hope to believe that he will become a Senator.

TO THE BENEVOLENT.

AID FOR PALESTINE.—A Committee has been appointed by the Congregation Emanuel to make collections for our distressed brethren in Palestine. Famine, pestilence and distress are now ravaging the entire country, and it becomes the solemn duty of each and every Israelite to contribute his mite in behalf of so noble and holy a cause. Do not refuse the Committee, and say we have enough poor here requiring relief. Our poor are not as needy and in such distress as our impoverished brethren in the Holy Land. Do not let us lose the honor and fair name which the Israelites of San Francisco have always had for their charities; but let us willingly, cheerfully and bountifully assist the Committee as far as lies in our power, so that a large amount may be quickly raised and forwarded without delay to our suffering brethren. We would suggest that our co-religionists in the country districts should also make up subscriptions, and proceed at once about the matter in an earnest spirit.

EUREKA TURN VEREIN.—The second anniversary ball of this Society, which numbers among its members a goodly number of co-religionists, took place on Saturday last at Platt's Hall, and was a success. At 10 o'clock the pupils, and afterwards the grown members, under the leadership of Mr. Koch, went through a course of free exercises which were rendered with great precision. Later in the evening pyramids were formed which elicited merited applause. Messrs. Koch and Green then gave an exhibition of their agility and strength in a series of acrobatic performances. The ease and grace with which they performed some very difficult feats were surprising. The gymnastics closed by club-swinging, a most health-giving exercise, by one of the Turners. The ball then continued till early in the morning. Great credit is due to the Committee of Arrangements and, also, to Messrs. Koch and Marquard, the leaders, for the pleasant and agreeable entertainment afforded to the delighted participants.

MR. D. E. BANDMANN continues to attract large and discriminating audiences on the nights of his performances at Maguire's Opera House. As a tragedian his scholarly and original style attract universal attention, and the admirable rendition of "Hamlet," "Narcisse," "Othello," "Iago," "Richelieu," and kindred characters, combine to elevate him to the position of one of the first tragedians in the world. Mr. Bandmann deserves great credit for the mastery he has achieved of the English language, and all Israel can take just pride in his efforts. He performs again this evening. In the course of a few days he will produce a new play, "The Old Corporal," written by Mr. House of New York, the collaborator of Boucicault in "Arrah-na-Pogue."

REFORM OF CRIMINALS.—A project has been inaugurated the past week to aid the inmates of our county and State prisons in returning to the paths of industry and becoming respectable members of society. Such a movement deserves the support and countenance of all respectable citizens, and we hope every assistance will be given towards the attainment of so desirable and commendable an object. The gentlemen who have interested themselves and taken the initiative in the matter are persons of position and reliability, and we have every confidence in the successful result of the proposition.

OUR NEW YORK CORRESPONDENCE.

From the resident Correspondent of THE HEBREW.

New York, October 16, 1865.
EDITOR HEBREW:—The past few days have been the dullest ones for items that I have ever yet experienced. There is positively nothing to write about, and although on this occasion, I may manage to send my usual correspondence, and it may appear as lengthy as some of former times, nevertheless, in doing so, I will be compelled to speak of matters not of much general interest and which under other circumstances I would not notice. In other words, I will endeavor to use as many words, as possible in saying nothing. Frank, am I not? Not every one would concede that any certain writing of his was cois preterea nihil. But then I always prefer to be plain and state at the outset what is to be expected, so that the reader may be forewarned and not be disappointed at anything that may follow.

At first, indeed, I was tempted to manufacture the details of an imaginary elopement among our co-religionists, and with its recital delight and gratify your lady readers, but I instantly saw that it was not right, even if it were not out of place to introduce any of such trash into your country. So that finally we must come to the conclusion—not of my letter—that the reader, as is the case often with a hungry traveler, must rest satisfied with the dish set before him, however great his appetite, or meagre the contents of the platter.

Let us look over our bill of fare and see what we have; under the heading of

MISCELLANEOUS.

The holidays being passed, and every good Israelite having absolved himself of the evils and wrong doings of the bye-gone year, has resumed his business, prepared it necessary to lay in another good stock of sins to unload at the next approach of the autumnal festivals. The signs "Closed on account of holidays," are torn down, the dingy shutters have been taken from the windows, and the bright sunlight permitted to enter and drive away the darkness and the loneliness that have ruled there the past few days. Goods and wares are re-arranged in their most inviting attitudes, clerks are at their posts and customers begin to throng the aisles, and the busy hum of trade is once more heard.

For many years the Jewish holidays have not been so strictly and generally observed as on the present occasion. Every one of our synagogues was thronged with worshippers, and in fact all things betoken a pious era in the history of New York Jews. Of course we are glad to write this fact, and hope that the religious fervor thus happily inaugurated with the new year, will not be "as of a day's duration," nor be confined merely to the holidays, but will infest our brethren throughout the year.

An organization for the purpose of carrying out Rev. Dr. Adler's plan of establishing a Jewish Theological Seminary was effected last week, principally among the members of the Temple Emanuel Congregation. A constitution and bye-laws were adopted, officers elected, and everything put into working order. Ten dollars per year are the dues for a member of the association, while one hundred dollars will purchase a life interest in the society. They have already forty life members and about one hundred and twenty-five annual associates. If the institution is not made too much a Temple Emanuel organization, as it is attempted to be done, it may be successful in its projects, otherwise it will be a sectional matter and soon die out. A clause was introduced in the constitution to the effect that a majority of the directors be elected from the Temple Emanuel Congregation, thus throwing the balance of power into the hands of the last mentioned synagogue. If this is the manner in which Reformers would spread their doctrines, I am inclined to believe that they will have but few disciples. There are hundreds and perhaps thousands of Reformers outside of the Temple who have as great a right to be represented in any measure that is made obviously for the good of their cause as the Temple. There are only two reasons that have persuaded Rev. Dr. Adler to advocate the insertion of such a monopolizing clause into the constitution, and those are, first, to permit the Temple to rule the seminary, and secondly, to install Dr. Adler as chief salaried superintendent for life. The last mentioned cause may be harshly assigned, nevertheless I can see no other way to account for the introduction and passage of such an absurd clause. I would not urge a single individual to support an institution that inaugurates its proceedings with such parties and feelings.

The "Literary Constellation," the best literary society in New York, gave their sixth literary and musical soiree on the 9th inst. The hall was crowded with a most fashionable audience, and everything passed off in the happiest manner. This association is composed entirely of Israelites, a large number of whom are graduates of colleges.

B. F. Peixotto, Esq., has addressed a very eloquent letter to the B'nai B'rith, urging them all to come forward on behalf of the Jews of Palestine, for whose benefit subscriptions are now being collected. In most of the B'nai B'rith Lodges the epistle has been read and committees thereupon appointed to raise donations from among the brethren of the order. I understand quite a large sum to have been already raised. In a future letter I will give the full amount.

At the Congregation Dorech Amuno of this city, quite a surprise was excited by the donations of Morris Cohn, the chosen Thorah of the occasion. On being called on he offered nearly one thousand dollars. This is about the largest sum that has been donated in a congregation of this city at a single offering for many years. The gentleman gave a party at his house in the evening when a similar sum was raised among the guests present. Mr. Cohn is a hoop-skirt manufacturer, and the above is evidence of at least one benefit that crinolines has indirectly bestowed.

Having written and dwelt sufficiently long upon "nothing," I will delight the reader by writing nothing more, and subscribe myself.

One of the sections of the Constitution adopted by the Society, makes it incumbent upon every member "to observe in due form the most sacred Holydays in our Calendar, viz: New Year's Days, and the Day of Atonement." THEODORE AUERBACH, Secretary.

Grand Sopher of Dist. Gr. Lodge, No. 4, I. O. B. B.
SAN FRANCISCO, November, 1865.

RECOVERY OF THE REMAINS OF ANOTHER VICTIM OF THE YOSEMITE DISASTER.—On Thursday evening last the friends of Mr. Abraham Lindauer received a dispatch from Capt. Poole, of the Antelope, that his body had been recovered, and would be sent to this city the same evening. Mr. Lindauer was unmarried, and has relatives residing in Chicago and Cincinnati, to whom he was about paying a visit when this fearful catastrophe put an end to his life. He was of a mild, genial, cheerful and charitable disposition. His funeral took place last Friday afternoon, and was largely attended by the Eureka Benevolent Society, of which he was a member, and by his numerous friends, who followed his remains to the Home of Peace Cemetery, where Rev. J. M. De Sola delivered in English an eloquent eulogy, and Mr. A. Weissler read the prayers of our sacred religion in an excellent manner.

ROBBERY AND ATTEMPTED MURDER.—At an early hour on Monday morning, the night clerk at the What Cheer House, in this city, heard a noise close to one of the entrances to the building. On proceeding to the spot, he was attacked by two men and stunned by a blow on the head. The assailants broke open the safe and abstracted a portion of the contents, with which they managed to escape. The night watchman had but the instant before gone below for a cup of coffee, and on hearing a cry for help, immediately came up—being absent but three or four minutes. Although the alarm was given at once, there was no clue to aid in following and detecting the guilty parties; and notwithstanding the efforts of the police, and a handsome reward offered by the proprietor of the house, the affair as yet is shrouded in mystery.

S. F. AMATEURS.—The fifth subscription entertainment of this spirited and favorite association will be given to-night at Turn Verein Hall. The drama of "Michael Earle" forms the opening piece, followed by recitations, fancy dance, and songs. After which lengthy programs, the floor of the hall will be cleared for the benefit of those who may desire to indulge in the "misty mazes of the dance." Our thanks are due for favors extended.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE BALL.—Preparations are making for the celebration of the anniversary of this institution by a grand ball, to be given on December 14th, at Union Hall. Under the auspices of the reputable Committee who have the matter in charge, there can be no doubt that the arrangements will be perfect, and the affair redound to the credit of the Institute and its members.

The attention of every passer-by on Clay street, between Montgomery and Kearny, is sure to be attracted by the display of rich goods in the show-windows of Messrs. Locan & Co., No. 623. This firm have received by last steamer, a large shipment of splendid fancy goods of every description, suitable for Christmas presents. Call early.

We would call the attention of our readers and the public to the fine assortment of carpets, oil cloths, paper hangings, and upholstery goods of every description, to be found at the store of H. J. M. Trout, No. 618 Market street. Those desirous of refitting their residences for the coming holidays should give him an early call. See advertisement in another column.

FIRE INSURANCE.—We call the attention of our merchants and the insuring public in general, to the card of the San Francisco Fire Insurance Company, in Donohoe, Kelly & Co.'s building, corner of Montgomery and Sacramento streets.

INDUSTRIAL FAIR Mechanics' Institute.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE OF AWARDS ON California Brandy, Cordials and Bitters; held
September 28th, 1864.

First Premium Awarded to Squarza for Puncches.

First Premium for Cordials.

First Premium for Squarza's Hygienic Bitters.

The Committee think this is an occasion not only to award to true merit, and stamp with verity an article (or articles) worthy of public confidence and patronage, but also to put their seal of condemnation
upon VILLAINOUS COMPOUNDS, BASE IMITATIONS AND WORTHLESS COUNTERFEITS, which resemble the genuine only in their names.

Squarza's Puncches, Cordial and
Bitters,

on exhibition, declared them to be composed of the best material, and that the same were manufactured with science and utmost care.

The Committee, in their deliberation, had to rely entirely upon the numbers on the bottles; knowing nothing of the authors of either samples submitted to their examination, but were unanimous in their approbation of the one, and the condemnation of the other.

Respectfully submitted,
Squarza's Puncches, Cordial and
Bitters,

DR. L. ROWELL, Professor of Chemistry,
DR. L. J. CZAPKA,
FRANCIS C. BELDEN, Committee.
